THE UNIQUE HISTORY OF SOCIO-CULTURAL DEVELOPMENTS IN THE NEWFOUNDLAND VERNACULAR OF CANADIAN ENGLISH

On July 1, 2017, the Canadian people celebrated the 150th anniversary of the founding of their state. Therefore, Canadian political culture involves also a modern history compared with the political culture of the nations of Europe and Asia. It's short duration, the distinctive process of formation and development has no unequivocal assessment among scholars in both the Western world and among domestic Canadian scholars. Therefore the study of the modern history of Canadian political culture is of considerable scientific interest. Political culture is a key element in comprehending the political life of society, filling the state political development with cultural content, it is not only one of the basic categories for political science and political sociology, but also for history as a whole.

If political culture is understood as the historical and social experience of the national community, which influences the formation of the main institutions of the political system, political orientations, political behavior of individuals, small and large groups, then we can say that studying the history of political culture, we should define the values and orientations of people, as well as political norms of behaviour, which condition their aspirations and intentions. Such studies in the study of the history of Canadian political culture have not been conducted, so the scientific relevance of this analysis is due to the lack of study of the process of genesis and evolution of Canadian political culture. The scientific relevance also lies in the need to study and identify the basic patterns of development, determine the process of formation of the characteristic features, traditions and values of Canadian political culture in its history.

The political relevance of the study resides in the identification of the functional and activity characteristics of Canadian political culture as an illustration of Canadian political culture in order to obtain sound scientific recommendations for the organization of the political process and political practice in emerging multi-component societies, as well as an understanding of political behavior under the influence of multiple factors of the social environment.

The topic under consideration has practical relevance and developing countries that have taken the path of democratic development, allows you to understand the causes and sources of political culture development, opportunities and technology to manage this development, to assess the peculiarities of formation and development of political culture in modern civilization conditions of mass postindustrial society, use different approaches to the analysis of problems of political history and topical problems of political theory and practice.
